

ABOUT IHPM

The Institute for Health and Productivity Management (IHPM) is a global enterprise created to establish the full value of employee health and maximize its impact on business performance. It does this by helping employers identify the total cost impact of employee illness, choose the best opportunities to reduce this cost impact and improve performance, and measure the success of their efforts.

The premier resource on health and productivity, IHPM works with all who have a stake in employee health: employers, providers, suppliers, health plans and workers themselves. Through its national advisory groups and an expanding network of alliances and affiliates, the Institute is gathering the data, developing and testing the tools, and building the business case for health and productivity management globally.
